Sotheby's
LOCATION
LIFESTYLE
PRICE RANGE
YOUR NEXT PIN AWAITS

Yara Shahidi's Favorite Red Lipstick — and the Rest of Her Beauty Routine

Plus, a few riverside hotel in Portugal, hand-rocketed rugs and more recommendations from T Magazine.

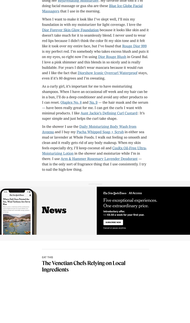

By Nicole Lee

July 15, 2020, 8:00 a.m. ET

You're reading The T List newsletter. A weekly roundup of what T Magazine editors are noticing and coveting right now, and guides to the world's best hotels and destinations. Sounds worthy. Get it in your inbox.

STAY IN STYLE

The Actress Yara Shahidi's Beauty Regimen

Left: To achieve Yara Shahidi style in the summer, "Grown-ish" actress turns to Bare Minerals global brand ambassador since 2017. Right: Actresses from top left, Awkwafina, Emily Ratajkowski, Kelly Rowan and Yara Shahidi. Bare Minerals Original Loose Powder Foundation, $29; Bare Minerals Mineral Veil, $29; Jouer Cosmetics Essential Lip Enhancer Universal Nude Lip Gloss, $20; Jouer Cosmetics Essential Lip Enhancer Universal Red Lip Gloss, $20; Bare Minerals Original Loose Powder Foundation, $29; Bare Minerals The Quad II Vitamin E Blends, $59; Amazon.com. Portrait courtesy of Yara Shahidi; Getty Images (4)

By Lola Ends

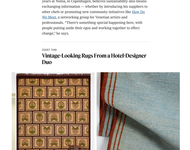

I used to be a 10-minute girl, but I'm consistently in makeup for work as giving my skin a break and sticking to the basics has definitely been the lesson I've learned this year. I use Cetaphil Gentle Skin Cleanser and Dr. Barbara Sturm's Hyaluronic Serum and The Good C Serum. I have a rest chain with my dermatologist, Dr. Dendy Engelman, and she's helped me find a lot of my go-to personal line of products outside of Malaika Skin Care, right now I'm using her Microvenation Moisturizer. My favorite little tool if I'm having facial massage or gua sha are these Blue Ice Globe Facial Massagers that I use in the morning.

For my eyes, I'm a mascara girl. I have a super wet, I'll miss my foundation is really my moisturizer for light coverage. I love the Dior Forever Skin Glow Foundation because it looks like skin and it's not heavy. I'm a combination skin girl, I have dry areas and I get oily because I didn't think the color fit my skin tone and I was like, "Oh, I'm not a Dior girl," but it's actually a really good shade. It is my perfect red. I'm normally like a brown blush and peach on my eyes, so right now I'm using Dior Beauty Blush in Coral, but I also love mascara and this formula is so nicely and it's buildable. For years I didn't wear mascara because it would run because I'm a sweaty girl. I love Diorshow Pump 'N' Volume mascara, even if it's 40 degrees and I'm sweating.

As a curly girl, it's important for me to have moisturizing shampoo. When I have an occasion and I want my hair to be a look, I'll do a deep conditioner and I love my Curl Keeper Original Tool. It's like a brush and a comb in one, and I've been using it for years. I can get the curls I want in minimal products. I like Aunt Jackie's Defining Curl Custard. It's super simple and just helps the curl take shape.

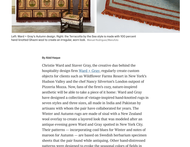

In the shower I use the Daily Moisturizing Body Wash from Aveeno and I love the Pacific Whipped Soap + Scrub in either tea tree or lavender at Whole Foods. I rub out loofas in smooth and I love the Aveeno Daily Moisturizing Lotion. I'm also a fragrance girl and I love Burberry Summer Eau de Toilette. I put on Aveeno Active Naturals Daily Moisturizing Lotion in the shower and moisturize when I'm in the shower. I love the Aveeno Rosemary Lavender Deodorant, that's the only out of fragrance thing that I use consistently. I try to nail the light-box thing.

The Interpreters - At Home
Five exceptional experiences. The extraordinary price.
Limited time only. Learn more at your local store.
Learn more
Ad Feedback

STAY HOME

The Venetian Chefs Relying on Local Ingredients

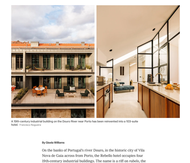

Left: Tantalyzing pan al Venezia's Cinnamon Gallegiante (or "Floating Cinema") ice cream and toast made by Marco Bravetti, who hungers some ingredients from the nearby farmers. Right: Ice cream and T-shirt from Bravetti's Gelateria Artigianale Venchi Unica. Portrait courtesy of Marco Bravetti; Ice cream and T-shirt from Pan Gelato

By Nicholas Kurti

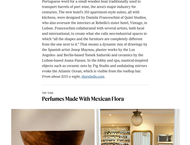

When Silvia Bosco and Marco Zambon took over Venchi's Gelateria Artigianale in Venice's Dorsoduro district in 2018, the Italian family-run maker then-two decades, served classic Venetian recipes like squab risk pasta and fritto misto if more using seafood flown in from the mainland. Now, the duo has reinvented the menu to focus on the region who changes local products and culinary traditions in Venice and Ricciarelle Cookies of Lucca — a strong couple began remaking Ricciarda La Carte's menu to feature ingredients grown on farms within 60 miles of the city. "We've been working with local farmers and chefs for talks at the Taste of the Dolomites event to explore ancient wild local herbs such as salicornia and artemisia or dishes including endive carpaccio from the Rialto Market with seasoned turnips and miso-cotone herbs. In May, Bosco and Zambon opened a new gelateria on the island of Pellestrina, famous for its Lido Asseritan cooking through Venetian ingredients. Another community-minded Venice chef, Mauro Lorenzon of Terra Cucina a Pellestrina, has been working with local farmers to source Venetian ingredients like mustard and black beans, and with fishermen to source lesser-used seafood such as mullet and the invasive blue crab and organizes culinary pop-up at events like the Venice Architecture Biennale and the Giornata Gastronomica Un "Floating Cinema" Gelateria Artigianale Venchi Unica. Bravetti's gelato shop will create at Noma, in Copenhagen, believes sustainability also means exchanging information — whether by introducing his suppliers to other chefs or promoting new community initiatives like Ilaria De Pin Mosti, a networking group for Venetian artists and craftspeople. "We're all in the same boat as restaurateurs, with people passing aside their egos and working together to effect change," he says.

Editor's Picks
Where the Women Are: Meet Hotel Owners Around the World
Lucy Boyd is Bringing Her Cool Girl Aesthetic to Hotel Design
Two Weeks You Should Spend in Tokyo
Ad Feedback

ABOUT TIME

Vintage-Looking Rugs From a Hotel Designer Duo

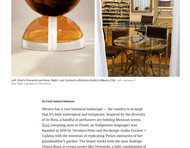

Left: Mark + Grey's Autumn design. Right: the "terracotta by the Sea stole to work with 100 percent hand-knotted wool and inspired by Canada and Spain. Portrait courtesy of Mark + Grey

By Odell Hauser

Christie Ward and Sharon Grey, the creative duo behind the hospitality design firm Mark + Grey, regularly create custom objects for clients such as Wildflower Farms Resort in New York's Finger Lakes region and the Ace Hotel and Swim Club in Palm Springs, Phoenix Mesa. Now, fans of the firm's cozy, nature-inspired aesthetic will be able to take a piece of it home. Ward and Grey have launched a collection of hand-knotted wool area rugs in seven styles and three sizes, made in India and Nepal by artisans with whom the pair have collaborated for years. The Mark and Samson rugs are made of wool from a New Zealand wool overlay to create a layered look that was modeled after an Australian sheepskin rug that Ward has had for 15 years. The Thair patterns — incorporating a mid-figure for Winter and waves of summer for Autumn — are based on Swedish herbarium specimen sheets that the pair found while antiquing. Each hand-drawn pattern was designed to evoke the seasonal colors of Arabic in Spring, Summer, Autumn and Winter. Ward and Grey recommend rugs in a natural backings. "In a bigger space, we feel a rug makes for an interesting substitute for art," she says. From $3,000 per runner, markandgrey.com.

The Interpreters - At Home
Five exceptional experiences. The extraordinary price.
Limited time only. Learn more at your local store.
Learn more
Ad Feedback

STAY HOME

A Riverside Hotel With a Rooftop Bar in Portugal

A 19th-century riverside building in the Douro River town Peso Da Regua accommodates a 103-suite hotel. Portrait courtesy of Infante

By Gisele Williams

On the banks of Portugal's river Douro, in the historic city of Vila Nova de Gaia across from Porto, the Bohella hotel occupies four 19th-century riverside buildings. The hotel's owner, Jorge Ferreira de Portugaise wanted for a small riverside hotel traditionally used to transport barrels of port wine, the area's major industry for centuries. Opened in May, the hotel's interiors, by the Porto architecture firm Arquitetos Associados, are by Joana Vasconcelos, who also oversaw the interiors at Bebello's sister hotel, Vinoga, in Lisbon. Vasconcelos collaborated with several artists, both local and international, to create what she calls non-traditional spaces in the hotel. Among the 103 suites are contemporary rooms with views of the river. The hotel also features a dynamic mix of drawings by the Spanish artist Jaume Plensa, planter works by the Los Angeles- and Berlin-based Studio Sabbatini and ceramics by the Lisbon-based Joana Franco. In the lobby and spa, neutral-inspired tones and natural materials, such as Douro schist, a stone found under the Atlantic Ocean, which is visible from the building bar. From about $215 a night, thebohella.com.

STAY IN

Perfumes Made With Mexican Flora

Left: Sara's Granada perfumes Night. Late Summer's effortless wisdom in Mexico City. Left: Lucy Darcy's Hey, Night. Courtesy of participants

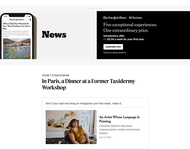

By Carla Gahlon Hartmann

Mexico has a vast botanical landscape — the country is so large that it's both subtropical and temperate. Inspired by the diversity of its flora, a handful of perfumers are blending Mexican botanicals into their fragrances. Sara Gonzalez, an Anglo-Mexican perfumer who grew up between Mexico City and Granada, Spain, launched Sara Gonzalez with the intention of replicating Proulx memories of her grandmother's garden. The brand works with the now-Rodrigo Flores-Roux, a perfumer based in Mexico City, to create scents based on native plants and unique ingredients, including a packaging that doubles as a vase after the fragrance is finished. Flores-Roux also works with Angelina Lucy Darcy, a perfumer. Huber in 2014 that uses ingredients such as Mexican tuberose, Oaxacan copal and Chiapas coffee to create perfumes that are both luxurious and unique. Lucy Darcy, a 22-year-old perfumer with a top note of Mexican acacia, references the two Aztec deities of fierce, Huehuetéotl, and Tezcatlipoca, the god of secrets, in her Archetypical, the goddess of beauty, who is often associated with the moon.

Martha Lopez Ramos, based in Mexico City, founded the brand Que Alí Pasha after she experienced skin issues in 2017 and dedicated herself to developing a line of beauty products complete with perfumes designed by Nadjib Achaibou, who created a set of fragrances that are inspired by Mexican landscapes, spiritual, and emotions and more, had in Mexico City's Condesa neighborhood. Lala Cadenas creates chords — small groups of ingredients — that evoke a wide variety of scents, from freshly cut grass to a bouquet of flowers. Each fragrance she creates for this event includes a personal message for the participant, which she delivers during a virtual appointment to develop a custom perfume for each participant.

BUY THIS

Bright Table Décor Inspired by a William Eggleston Drawing

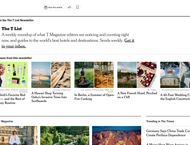

Below: Artichoke-covered vases and the gallery's Summer Solstice dinner. Left: Eggleston's drawing of a watermelon and a cantaloupe, which was used as the inspiration for the dinner's table setting. Courtesy of Gallery Diet Goldman, Photography by Phil Beer. Courtesy of Phil Beer

By Nicole Sapp

"I thought this was a good opportunity to work with a local artist," says Diet Goldman, the owner of the Memphis gallery Rebecca Gardner of Eggleston's drawing, a few of decorative accessories — napkins, a tablecloth and a lampshade — she created with fabrics from Electric Eggleston, a textile company run by Ardith Eggleston, daughter of the photographer William Eggleston. Gardner also used a few pieces from her own collection, including Hansen & Parriera, has long been a fan of Eggleston's fabrics, printed in Monroe, N.C., on Belgian linen and cotton-blend canvas, to look like a watermelon and a cantaloupe, respectively. Gardner also used a few pieces from her own collection, including Hansen & Parriera, has long been a fan of Eggleston's fabrics, printed in Monroe, N.C., on Belgian linen and cotton-blend canvas, to look like a watermelon and a cantaloupe, respectively. Gardner also used a few pieces from her own collection, including Hansen & Parriera, has long been a fan of Eggleston's fabrics, printed in Monroe, N.C., on Belgian linen and cotton-blend canvas, to look like a watermelon and a cantaloupe, respectively. "It reminds me of a trip I took with him to Miami when I was 22," Eggleston says. Hansen & Parriera is offering the overseas dinner service for 12 people, which includes a tablecloth, napkins, a lampshade and a table runner, for $1,000. Contact Rebecca Gardner at Goldenrod — a field of orange and purple sapphire with dots of yellow — which, when set together, create what Gardner calls "a wonderful cacophony for summer." From $50, fromthegallery.com.

The Interpreters - At Home
Five exceptional experiences. The extraordinary price.
Limited time only. Learn more at your local store.
Learn more
Ad Feedback

FROM T MAGAZINE

In Paris, a Dancer at a Former Taxidermy Workshop

And if you read one thing on Instagram over this week, make it.
An Artist Whose Language Is Farming
Charlotte Adelaide discusses photography, culture and growing plants.
July 2, 2020

More from The T List Newsletter
The T List
A weekly roundup of what T Magazine editors are noticing and coveting right now, and guides to the world's best hotels and destinations. Sounds worthy. Get it in your inbox.
Recommended from The New York Times
Yara Shahidi's Favorite Red Lipstick — and the Rest of Her Beauty Routine
A Slender Deep Tummy Tattoo Grooms Teen Sex Surfboards
In Berlin, a Summer of Open-Air Cooking
A Man Turned Black Powder on a Cliff
A Art Fair Working Cafe in the English Countryside
Trending in The Times
Coronavirus Says China Took Covid Data From Doctors Overseas
A Major Shoe Maker Arrives in Cambodia

Simbarashe Cha for The New York Times

Are These the Most Expensive Jeans in the World?

Lori Chips

Why a Tiny Trough Garden Always Attracts an Audience

PAID POST: GO TÜRKIYE

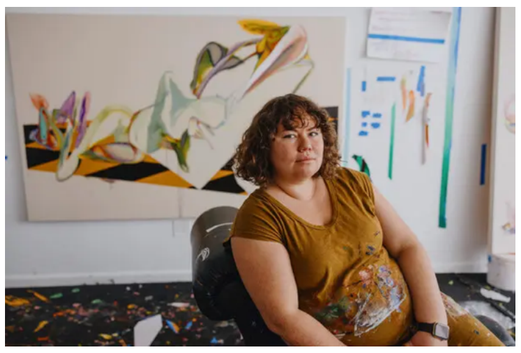

Let Your Feelings Guide You Through Turkey's Hidden Gems

Türkiye
goturkiye.com

Alice Zoo for The New York Times

Gotta Save the Castle? Start a Podcast.

Nolwen Cifuentes

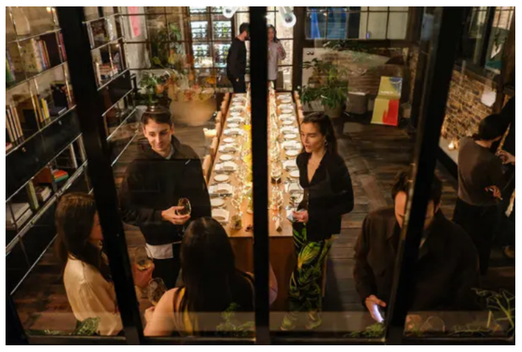

An Artist Whose Language Is Painting

Alberto Pezzal/AP Photo

The Renaissance Is Having a Renaissance

Editors' Picks

Marie Hennechart

In Paris, a Dinner at a Former Taxidermy Workshop

Joann Pai for The New York Times

A Walk in Paris: Gardens, Greenery and Flower Shops

Joann Pai for The New York Times

6 Paris Bistros to Try Now

Mikala Jones, Surfer Known for Photography Inside Waves, Is Dead

12 Easy, Budget-Friendly Pastas That Don't Skimp on Flavor

Encountering the Infuriating, Overwhelming and Unwanted Smart Tech in My Hotel Room

Manhunt Continues for 'Survivalist' Murder Suspect Who Escaped Jail

Chicago Residents Take Shelter After Tornado Touches Down

Texas A&M Celebrated a New Journalism Director. Then Came the Complaints.

$1.1 Million Homes in Kentucky, Texas and Pennsylvania

Madonna Officially Postpones Celebration Tour

ADVERTISEMENT

The New York Times | All Access

Five exceptional experiences.
One extraordinary price.

Introductory offer.
~~€3~~ €0.50 a week for your first year.

SUBSCRIBE NOW

Cancel or pause anytime.

Shared with you by a Times subscriber.

LEARN MORE